TEHRAN - The Ministry of Energy announced on Saturday that the country has withdrawn from the recent deal made with Iran's Arab neighbors, Lebanon and Syria, for gas. The agreement, which was agreed at the summit of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) and a number of countries in April, stipulated that Iran will produce 2.4 million barrels per day of oil and it will be repaid by the Arab states with the oil delivered to them. The amount of oil was calculated to be equal to 2.4 million barrels. The two-year-old agreement was signed by Iran and the OPEC's third largest producer, Saudi Arabia. However, Saudi Arabia's position was that it was willing to sell oil to Iran for the determined prices, but Iran did not want to talk to the Saudis about oil prices. Tehran was also unwilling to sell the oil to Saudi Arabia at the determined prices, because Riyadh was stopping the supply of the oil to the Iranian market. The ministry also announced that the country's oil output remained nearly unchanged at 4.5 million barrels per day since April, 2019.. In the present study, acute toxicity of WO, WG, and MF was evaluated in acute toxicity test for 28 days following oral administration of a single dose of 200 mg/kg of body weight. No mortality or clinical signs related to toxicity were observed. Feed consumption and body weight of rats were recorded throughout the study period. No significant difference was observed in food intake and body weight of experimental groups compared with control group. All hematological and biochemical parameters were within normal physiological ranges for the experimental rats. Further, histopathological examination of all organs of WO, WG, and MF-treated rats revealed no apparent difference from the control group. These observations suggested that the oral administration of WO, WG, and MF was safe for 28 days
