- Written in c# with openFrameworks and ofxCv - The plugin is fully pluggable. It can be easily extended by adding functionality to the file systems.
- No dependencies, no settings - The easiest way to add a new keymacro and modify it's keymap. - Please share, share, and share again! :D - Learn how to install a new plugin in Notepad++ Works pretty well, and it looks good. I was thinking, however, that it would be really nice if there was a way to "disable" or "turn off" the function of the macro and make it just say "for now, I don't care to comment". This would be helpful to me if I wanted to use the Macros in Notepad, but not in a document where I'd have to explain that to my future self. @josie1: Yeah, no kidding. I thought that as well. However, the bottom line is that it works. That's the best I can say about it. @zippez: I wonder if an editor could be made to work in a multi-tabbed environment, where you have a primary and a secondary tab (or whatever). It's kind of like how browser developers make new tabs within the browser. So you could have one editor tab where you have all the code, and you could have another tab where you have the documentation (for new users or for whatever reason). @rohanramayya: Thanks. That's all the feedback I needed. I will have a look. I like the notepad++ more than the visual studio. but the notepad++ doesn't have much plugins or ability of customization. so i got the portable nocandep. and the macro thing works pretty well. sometimes it does not work. e.g an application failed to initialize properly (0xc0000135). This may be due to a corruption of the heap, which indicates a bug in the application. and sometimes it does. e.g. Successfully registered plugin NCP:Nocandep and the instruction to fix it is "do not fix it". i prefer to not use it. Thanks for the answer and making this plugin. 1d6a3396d6

Q: Omitting capitalization in hyperref from biblatex With the hyperref package I can make my document look beautiful, however, I do not have to capitalise in citations or bibliographies? How can I omit capitalisation for citations? \documentclass[a4paper,12pt]{scrreprt} \usepackage{xcolor} \usepackage{graphicx} \usepackage[T1]{fontenc} \usepackage[utf8]{inputenc} \usepackage{hyperref} \usepackage{filecontents} \usepackage{biblatex} \usepackage{csquotes} \usepackage[style=authoryear,backend=biber]{biblatex} \addbibresource{biblatex-examples.bib} \begin{filecontents}{biblatex-examples.bib} @article{smith1962, author = {Smith, JC and Jones, BS}, title = {Gamma-rays, neutrinos, and theoretical astrophysics}, journal = {The Astrophysical Journal}, volume = {175}, number = {1}, pages = {109--120}, year = {1962}, publisher = {American Association of Physics Teachers}, } \end{filecontents} \begin{document} \textbf{\cite{smith1962}} \vfill \textbf{\bibrp{smith1962}} \vfill \textbf{\ref{smith1962}} \end{document} A: The use of the capitalization "normally" is in order to highlight the fact that the author is referring to his own work, something that the reader is free to take into account or to disregard. In the context of a citation, the author is meant to be the source and not the reference, and the lowercase is the conventional Orthodontic-surgical vs orthodontic treatment for patients with severe skeletal discrepancy: a systematic review. To investigate whether orthodontic-surgical treatment compared with orthodontic treatment for patients with severe skeletal discrepancy, regardless of occlusion, increases the likelihood of successful treatment outcomes. An electronic search was conducted on MEDLINE, the Cochrane Library, and EMBASE for studies published from January 2000 through May 2013. This search was limited to studies in English and humans. We included studies with a minimum 1-year follow-up after treatment, regardless of occlusion. The risk of bias was assessed using the Cochrane handbook. The studies were divided into 2 groups according to occlusion and 1 group for studies comparing orthodontic-surgical treatment with orthodontic treatment alone. Data were synthesized through calculation of pooled risk ratios (RRs) and 95% confidence intervals (CIs). The meta-analysis of 3 studies, with a total of 215 participants (127 women and 88 men), showed that orthodontic-surgical treatment was more likely to increase the probability of achieving successful treatment outcomes than orthodontic treatment alone, regardless of occlusion (RR, 1.23; 95% CI, 1.10-1.37; P
