Expert tips on staying cool in the classroom

Have your summer break over and the new school year is about to begin. If your schedule is like mine, you'll be cramming a lot of things into a short amount of time. Some of this may involve the schools teachers, but with the summer break there's time to lay the groundwork for the upcoming year. In preparation for the first day back, I came across a lot of really useful information, that I thought I'd share with you. If you're like most people, you'll be under a lot of pressure when you're back in class. Not only is your classroom a place of learning, but it's also a place of potential embarrassment. This is where some of the science tips can help. A different tactic is to put your thinking cap on and write your own advice on how to get through the day. Try to be a patient, accepting and understanding of others. Once you get to the school, there are going to be some people who are going to be confused, angry and nervous. Try to be more empathetic to them than you might be at home, if you can do that. Take a deep breath and try to relax. Don't panic, but you'll be able to cope better when you can
