The following is a summary of the conclusions of the PES Technical Analysis Team, so you can see what we've been working on for PES 2018, and the latest news regarding the game's commercial release. ■

PES technical analysis of Fifa 22 Cracked Version 1) Movement system "HyperMotion Technology," which uses motion capture data collected from 22 real-life players playing a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits, was used for the real-time movement of the player. Here we will introduce the main results of the movement system, which is entirely new for PES, and was meticulously developed based on the knowledge of the PES designers. When PES developers were developing the movement system, they made it in such a way that the player would appear to use the motion-capture data of real-life players not only for movement, but also for other parts of the game, such as the pose, acceleration, movement speed, simulation of the attack, dribbling and taking players on. The movement system is contained in all of the gameplay aspects such as passing and dribbling, acceleration and movement of the player, standing still. We divided the movement system into 10 subsystems and it was developed based on the results of the analysis of 22 real-life movements. ▲1) Player Movements: These were divided into Movement, Dribbling and Shot 2) Player Body Model "Kinematics Engine" has been developed from scratch to the extent that PES doesn't have a body model. "Kinematics Engine" has been developed from scratch to the extent that PES doesn't have a body model. As the movement system was developed by applying the mechanism of the "Kinematics Engine" to each of the subsystems, the accuracy of the player model increased. The movements of the upper and lower body segments were also calculated based on the behavior of individual segments, and were even added to the movements of the upper and lower body segments. Due to the movement of real-life players, the upper body and lower body of the player vibrated, but because the movements of the upper and lower body of the player were calculated, those motions were accurately calculated and then linked. 3) Player Poses "Pose System"
