==== When the website Roblox was first introduced to the public in 2006, it was a simple platform that enabled children to create games and share them with other players. While its user-created games were intended to be free, many players were not keen on the fact that they required Robux—a virtual currency that could be earned by completing specific tasks within the game and could be spent on additional features. More recently, Roblox added a mobile app to its website, which allowed players to create games and play them without leaving the website.
