CADprofi version 11.09 160118 CADprofi version 11.09 160118 Private health insurers are responding to the Supreme Court's decision in King v. Burwell by offering cheap plans across the country. White House Press Secretary Josh Earnest on Thursday described the Affordable Care Act as "fundamentally stable," saying the health care law remains the law of the land despite the Supreme Court's ruling that it be amended. The White House has been pressuring insurers to continue selling plans through the exchanges, even though they are no longer eligible for subsidies to offset the costs of their low-cost health plans. ADVERTISEMENT Earnest made the remark while discussing the future of the health law on the South Lawn of the White House during a special press event with the head of a big insurance company. Earnest said that the Obama administration will attempt to work with the insurance industry to find a way to provide affordable health care options for low-income consumers. "We expect over time to see more competition in the marketplace. We'll work with the insurance industry to provide those options," he said. C-Track E-Filing 6d1f23a050
